

Davide Di Giorgio

SPEAKER OVERVIEW · PREPARED FOR THE FRANCHISE ASSOCIATION OF NEW ZEALAND

I help leaders build teams who care enough to perform when nobody's watching.

Davide has spent thirty years studying and closing the gap between the store that runs great and the one that doesn't, across resort floors, airline cabins, classrooms, restaurant and hospitality floors, opening night in theater, and opening day in retail: a range as wide as it is deep, enough to recognize the gap wherever it's hiding. In his most recent stretch, directing field operations and leading the first international expansion of a billion-dollar franchise brand, he spent 330 days a year on the road for nearly four years, real time in the locations, watching the same pattern repeat: a training initiative that worked in the pilot location and stalled everywhere else, a customer-experience standard that held in some units and never took in others, a new product rollout that landed differently every single shift. There, he reverse-engineered what operational excellence actually looks like on the ground. He personally spent three days to five weeks on-site at each of the 69 locations he opened and supported, including all 24 of that brand's first locations in Canada. Those locations went on to outperform the rest of the system, run by people who became ambassadors for the standard themselves. Davide calls that gap the most expensive ceiling in business: good enough. It's also the title of his newest book.

Road-tested, proven at scale, and built to outlast the leader in the room.

What's happening in your stores?

Whatever you're facing, the question underneath is the same: what does your team do when nobody's watching?

"The rollout worked in the pilot store. Everywhere else, it faded."

Training landed as information, not belief. Proving it works once isn't the job — proving it travels is.

"Our best location and our average location run the exact same playbook."

Same standards, same training, wildly different results. That gap isn't a documentation problem.

"Head office can't be in every store, every shift."

True. The real question is what happens in the shifts nobody from corporate ever sees.

"A new location opens, or a new leadership team takes over, and for a while, it works."

Then it fades back. Compliance lasts only as long as the launch urgency; commitment is what's left when that wears off.

Built around your delegates

I don't bring a stock talk. Once I know what your delegates want to hear, I shape the session around it: the same core idea, teams that commit instead of comply, aimed at the questions already on their minds. Places I can start:

- Hard conversations without the correction trap. Honest feedback that builds commitment, not compliance.
- The standard that travels. Why the same playbook lands in some locations and fades in others.
- Training that lasts past the quarter. Why rollouts fade, and how to make people believe what they were taught.
- When leadership changes hands. Keeping the standard in place once a new manager's urgency wears off.
- Keeping your good people. Why engagement stalls, and a better way to measure belief.

Tell me what your delegates are asking for, and we'll start there.

Custom Keynotes (30–75 min) · Masterclasses (½-day to multi-day) · Advisory retainers · Breakouts & Q&A "Brands that have achieved operational excellence didn't achieve it by mistake. They built it with intentionality. ... Every store that was thriving was following Davide's framework, and every store that struggled was not."

— Graciela Chadwick, COO, Seventh Wave Refreshments (former COO, Crumbl)

Davide Di Giorgio

FROM CORRECTION TO COMMITMENT

I help leaders build teams who care enough to perform when nobody's watching. For multi-unit, franchise, hospitality and retail businesses ready to reach beyond good enough.

Most leadership work is correction in kinder language: another survey, workshop or offsite. I work on what to remove, so commitment holds when nobody's watching.

► WATCH THE REEL

TEDx speaker, featured on TED.com · Author of Being Unapologetic and Good Enough · #1 Amazon bestselling author in 8 countries

WHY BOOK DAVIDE

- 30 years across theater, music, teaching, hospitality and franchise operations: the source of a subtractive method that pays off faster, and keeps paying off long after the keynote ends.
- 330 days a year on the road for nearly four years, directing field operations across 69 location openings in the US & Canada, including Crumbl's first international expansion.
- The operating systems he's built over three decades underpin more than $100M in net sales.
- More than quadrupled employee engagement: trained team members went from staying 6 months to over 2 years, with franchise-partner satisfaction up 25% and in-store revenue and customer satisfaction up to 12%.
- Years of holding teenagers' attention in the classroom have turned into an unprecedented keynote experience: immersive visuals, real humor and teaching built to land, not just entertain.
- Built to outlast Monday: every keynote is backed by a full ecosystem: the book, the Team Read Experience, advisory support and a library of resources that keeps growing, so teams leave with something to implement immediately, not a mood that fades by lunch.

"Davide is one of the most unique and engaging speakers our audience has ever experienced."

— Peter Montoya, Executive Director, ThriveUnion

ONE THESIS. THREE ENTRY POINTS.

01 From Correction to Commitment · SIGNATURE KEYNOTE

Building teams who care enough to perform when nobody's watching.

Great for franchise conventions · retail and hospitality conferences · leadership kickoffs and offsites · company-wide events

Audiences leave with why every correction-based fix hits a ceiling, the operating posture that makes belief-led performance hold at scale, and the Monday-morning conversation that starts it.

02 The Engagement Ceiling

Engagement stuck. Retention sliding. Managers leaving. Why nothing you've tried has broken through.

Great for CHRO · People & Culture · HR summits

Audiences leave with engagement seen as a belief problem, not a behavior one, a new frame for the middle-manager crisis, and three real ways to measure whether your people believe.

03 What Works Doesn't Scale

Why the gap between your best and your average keeps widening, and adding more won't close it.

Great for COO · multi-unit operators · international franchise systems · retail and hospitality groups · scaling businesses

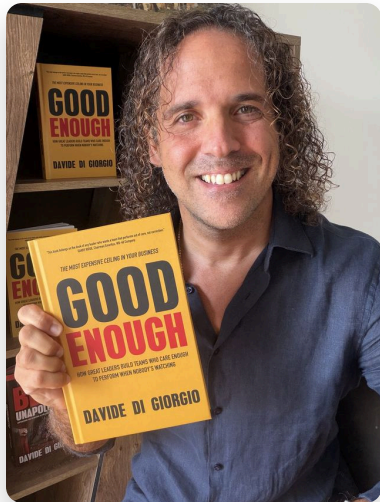

Audiences leave with the difference between compliance architecture and commitment architecture, and a model that makes your best location replicable across borders.

FORMATS Keynotes (30–75 min) · Masterclasses (½-day to multi-day) · Advisory retainers (6–12 months) · Breakouts & Q&A · Custom solutions

AUDIENCES Leadership summits & conferences · CEO / COO / CHRO offsites · Operations & franchise systems · Multi-unit operators · People & Culture

Davide Di Giorgio

THE SPEAKER & THE BOOK

Davide has spent thirty years asking one question: what makes a team perform when nobody's watching. He has asked it in places with nothing in common: theater, hotels, aircraft cabins, classrooms, and the operational floor of a billion-dollar brand. Born in Canada, a US dual citizen. When he's not speaking or working with clients, he's based in Sicily.

Good Enough, Davide's newest book, puts a name on what your operators already feel: the gap between the store that's running great and the one three miles away that isn't, between the shift that nails it and the one that doesn't, between the leader who gets it and the one who's still guessing. Then it hands you the tools to close it: how leaders build teams that perform because they want to, not because someone's watching.

Backed by the Team Read Experience (a guided way for teams to turn the book into decisions, not just notes) and the Franchise & Multi-Unit Operators Companion (each chapter re-aimed at the work of leading across distance and scale) — part of the full ecosystem behind every keynote.

TRUSTED BY

PRAISE FOR DAVIDE & GOOD ENOUGH

"Davide Di Giorgio sees something most leadership books miss entirely: the gap between a good day and a great one is never in the system, it's in what a team believes when nobody is checking. I spent eight countries and €340,000 learning that lesson the hard way, watching identical franchise systems produce completely different results depending on what the person running them believed. If you lead people across any distance you can't personally see, this book will change what you think your job actually is."

— Joad Lopez, International Franchise Expansion Advisor, author of Before You Sign Anything

"Confident, engaged managers create consistent operations, lower turnover, and stronger cultures. Davide develops leaders so exceptional that sales growth becomes the outcome, not the objective."

— Megan Moore, Franchisee, ZZA Hospitality Group

"I was skeptical going in, I'd worked with many trainers and consultants before. Davide quickly changed that. Direct impact on our labour costs and profitability."

— Shoab Khan, Multi-Unit Franchise Owner, Crumbl Cookies

"Overwhelmingly, our attendees rated Davide number one. A phenomenal speaker, and one of the easiest and most enjoyable people I've done business with."

— Casey Fox, Conference Director